

Report for 2020 CPBB AGM – 6 o'Clock Band

Hywel Jones

Having only started in late January, the band made very good progress up to the COVID-19 lockdown. We were very close to achieving my initial (personal) target of establishing a reasonably stable but flexible line up of regular/semi-regular players. I had been particularly pleased with our overall sound as an ensemble in the most recent two or three rehearsals. I am confident that we can be “gig ready” quite soon after a restart to rehearsals. In order to help with this, I plan to start sending out online activities and resources (similar to those I am making for my school students) in the near future.

As well as the members themselves, I would like to thank our small (but growing) army of enthusiastic parents. I would also like to thank everyone in the progress band who has supported us getting this far; either through sorting practical things behind the scenes or turning up to bolster our numbers (in particular, Richard H. and Rebecca for all their hard work).
